ENERGY STAR HOME IMPROVEMENT TIP:

Want a cost-effective way to improve energy efficiency at home? Seal gaps, cracks, and other leaks that let outside air into your home (especially in the attic), add insulation in the attic, and seal and insulate air ducts that run through attics or crawlspaces.

Many air leaks are easy to find because they are easy to feel – like those around windows, doors, and through electrical outlets. But hidden air leaks in attics, basements, and around chimneys are often more significant sources of energy loss.

Consider addressing these big leaks first because they will have a greater impact on improving your comfort and reducing your utility bills. Energy Star's "Seal and Insulate with Energy Star" has great resources and suggests places to look for these leaks. Visit the Energy Star website for more information at www.energystar.gov.
